Flourish in the Garden

GARDENS with LATITUDE

UPward & ONward!

What difference can 12 inches make to a garden? It can be transformative! During construction of the redesign of the Karen and Robert Scott Florida Garden, we brought in almost 300 loads of soil to raise the high point of the garden to 13 feet above sea level. Once we looked at the views, we were astonished to discover the amazing vistas of the wetlands to the south that we never expected. But to really develop them required raising the garden another foot! Once we confirmed that we could still create accessible paths for strollers and wheelchairs, the order went out to go up. Though it added a week to our schedule, the result was worth it! I hope that you enjoy these spectacular views across Lake Tupke and the Collier Enterprises South Wetlands as I do. Raymond Jungles, the noted landscape architect who redesigned the Scott Florida Garden, has been on-site several times over the summer during critical installations such as the placing of the great oolite blocks at the entrance.

The Garden hosted several exciting tours and meetings this summer. Native orchids took center stage when we hosted the North American Orchid Conservation Center in late April. Participants included representatives from the Smithsonian Institute, Atlanta Botanical Garden, Chicago Botanic Garden, Fairchild Tropical Botanic Garden, Florida International University, Illinois College, Marie Selby Botanical Gardens, and local partners including the Florida Panther National Wildlife Refuge, Fakahatchee Strand Preserve State Park, and the Naples Orchid Society. This meeting was to set priorities for native orchid conservation in the Southeastern US and begin the process of assigning responsibility for developing conservation plans for all endangered orchid species. The Garden is excited to be playing a key role in this ambitious but critical initiative.

In May, about 100 plumeria enthusiasts from around the world participated in the International Plumeria Conference at the Garden. The overwhelmingly positive feedback from the attendees regarding both our plumeria collection as well as the rest of the gardens was gratifying, as were the many new plumeria plants that we received. Many thanks to Hetty Ford, the Garden's Curator of Plumeria Collections, for all her hard work on the conference.

In June, we were proud to show the Garden to about 50 staff members from botanical gardens across the country and around the world. The annual meeting of the American Public Gardens Association was being held in Miami, and Naples Botanical Garden was well represented. With support from the Naples Garden Club, the 2016 Swing into Spring Golf Tournament, and Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo McDonald, we were able to send about 25 staff members for at least part of the conference to meet and learn from their peers. This funding is also allowing us to send six staff members to the regional conference for Central American and Caribbean Gardens in Panama City, Panama. We look forward to expanding the potential partnerships and conservation initiatives that may come out of this meeting.

Our major initiative this summer has been working on the strategic plan and a facilities master plan that will help us to achieve our Vision 2026. The plan is on schedule to go to the Board for consideration in December.

As of this writing, the Garden's search committee is working on the selection process for my successor. They have had to sift through an enormous candidate pool and it is expected that they will be announcing the Garden's next Executive Director this fall. 🌿

The Garden Bids FAREWELL to Designer MADE WIJAYA

Naples Botanical Garden mourns the loss of longtime friend, collaborator, and designer of the Marcia and L. Bates Lea Asian Garden, Made Wijaya. His vignettes of Asia through borders and history, is a favorite of guests and horticulturalists alike. His dedication to aesthetics and detail was unparalleled.

The tropical garden designer was world-renown for his work on hotels and personal properties such as David Bowie's on the island of Mustique. His style and flair, deeply infused with his love of Bali, Indonesia, became his signature and his mark on the world. Wijaya's design of the Lea Asian Garden included structures built entirely in Bali by Balinese workers, shipped to Florida, before being reassembled and rebuilt by those same workers.

"Made was one of the most complex and engaging people that I have met. He was acerbic and outrageous, a brilliant designer and commander-in-chief of his gardening guerrillas, a raconteur, stubborn and sometimes difficult, a wit that Noel Coward would have been jealous of and one of humanity's kindest souls. The world has truly lost a light with his passing," said Brian Holley, Executive Director of Naples Botanical Garden.

Born Michael White, in Sydney, Australia, Wijaya arrived in Bali in 1973 in an oft-told story of jumping off a ship during a rainstorm. His accomplishments ranged from the design of wildly romantic landscapes to authoring several books and columns, as well as being a skilled photographer, Javanese and Balinese-style dancer, and tennis player.

Made Wijaya's last visit to Naples Botanical Garden was in November 2015 for a meeting of the Garden's Dream Team to guide the next decade of growth. He also gave a standing-room-only lecture as part of the Lifelong Learning program titled Theatrical Nature – My Life Creating Exotic Gardens in the Tropics.

His joie de vivre, larger than life persona, and endless generosity will have a lasting influence on the Garden. He will be missed.

“Made had already been selected to be a member of our Dream Team and Marcia and I had already decided to fund the building of the Asian Garden based on his early designs, even before he visited Naples for the first time. On our initial encounter we quickly realized that we were in the presence of a legitimate character – bursting with enthusiasm and energy and sporting the most faded, worn out silk sport coat I’ve ever seen. Friendly and gregarious, always accompanied by humor, he was as conversant with current events, the arts, politics, travel, etc., as with things botanic. That same enthusiasm and energy was with him when we spent time with him on his most recent trip to Naples last fall.

On that last trip his pride and love for the whole garden, and especially his own Asian Garden, was obvious. The Dream Team had come from far and near to spend a few days assessing the state of our present gardens, suggesting modifications and helping us to envision what the future might hold for all of our large undeveloped areas. Made arrived from Bali several days before the rest of the Dream Team and stayed later. Most of that time was spent at the Asian Garden. Made said he enjoyed spending many hours alone or with staff, pruning trees and plants, suggesting a few relocations and giving precise directions to the staff on exactly how to keep his Asian creation continually in pristine shape.

Made’s joy in his work and the natural world was infectious. He will be long remembered and missed by everyone at the Garden.” Bates Lea

PALMS of the Garden

Arenga bookeriana

Palms, symbols of the tropics with their unique silhouettes, are actually found in every continent of the world except Antarctica. They are perfect collection subjects for Naples Botanical Garden, which encompasses the flora from our latitude in the northern hemisphere to its reflection south of the equator. We hold everything from our ubiquitous state tree, the cabbage palm, Sabal palmetto, to the critically endangered and recently discovered Tabina spectabilis.

Although in our landscape palms are frequently quite tall, sometimes taller than most large trees, they are not at all related to them, and this causes some misunderstanding about how to take care of them. The Garden applies best horticultural practices to all our plants, so we rarely prune palm fronds before they are completely brown, when they have returned all their nutrients to the plant. If you follow these practices in your own garden, you will have healthier, more robust palms.

Have you ever tried to identify a palm? Here are some basic characteristics that will help. If you look at the leaves (fronds) they are usually divided – palmate (like your hand), pinnate (like a feather) or entire (no division). Palms are either solitary (one stem) or clustering (multiple stems).

Examples from our Garden include some very unusual specimens that are part of the Geraldine Martin Rare Palm Collection. Located on the north side of Irma's Garden, but best viewed from the south side, we have a palmate clustering palm that is a cross between two extraordinary parents, Coccothrinax crinita, old man palm, and Zombia antillarum, zombie palm.

The flame thrower palm, Chambeyronia macrocarpa, may be unusual in cultivation, but the Garden has about a dozen placed throughout the gardens around the Eleanor and Nicholas Chabraja Visitor Center. It is a solitary pinnate palm. Each time a new red leaf emerges, we try to have a red ephemeral sign in place prompting visitors to look up!

Arenga bookeriana is a charming example of the minority of palms that have entire (not divided) leaves. Situated in an ideal location near the southeast corner of Irma's Garden, this clustering palm with unusual dark green leaves may be examined in detail.

Critically endangered in its native Madagascar through uses as diverse as making hats, building houses, and serving as food (the palm heart), the pinnate Beccariophoenix madagascariensis was thought to be extinct until the 1980s. Even now there are probably fewer than 20 in the wild. We are fortunate to have an example that has not yet started to make a trunk. Somewhat resembling a coconut palm, in time it may be over 30 feet tall with massive rust-colored inflorescences. 🌿

This collection is made possible by the generosity of Geraldine Martin's four children who came together to honor their mother for her 90th birthday. By honoring their mother in this way, they have provided Naples Botanical Garden with the resources to conserve an endangered group of rare and beautiful palms. The Garden is so grateful for the Geraldine Martin Rare Palm Collection! Thank you Martin Family!

Zombia antillarum x Coccothrinax crinita

Beccariophoenix madagascariensis

This newest collection enhances our extensive collection of palm species from around the world. Of special note is the Catherine and Tim Ware Palm Collection, which comprises rare Caribbean palm species, including some very mature and sizeable specimens. Examples are the Bailey palms, Copernicia baileyana; Puerto Rican hat palm, Sabal causiarum; and swollen silver thatch palm, Coccothrinax spissa.

Origami in the Garden

December 3, 2016 – April 23, 2017

This season, the Garden welcomes Origami in the Garden, on view daily from December 3, 2016 through April 23, 2017.

These monumental sculptures created by artist Kevin Box tell the story of origami, the Japanese art of paper folding. The exhibition includes large-scale installations, gallery works, Box's own compositions as well as collaborative works with his wife Jennifer and world-renowned origami artists

Robert J. Lang, Te Jui Fu, Michael G. LaFosse and Richard L. Alexander.

Related family activities, lectures, and workshops will accompany the exhibition.

Origami in the Garden is presented in partnership with Artis-Naples, The Baker Museum. Please visit artisnaples.org or call 239.597.1900 for exhibition details.

FLOURISH IN THE GARDEN

A Celebration of the Power of Flowers to Create Beauty, Health, and Happiness
January 13–15, 2017 | Naples Botanical Garden

Naples Botanical Garden has partnered with the remarkable team of Louie Schwartzberg, Moving Art; Katie Hess, Lotus Wei; Lisa Reinhardt, Wei of Chocolate, Siobhan O'Connor, Health Editor, Time Magazine, Rona Berg, Editor-in-Chief of Organic Spa Magazine, and Rosemary Gladstar, author of numerous books including Herbal Healing for Women to create an amazing opportunity to explore the transformative effects of flowers and gardens on our beauty, health, and happiness.

Flourish in the Garden, a wellness symposium, is all about creating extraordinary experiences; some will give you the opportunity to learn, others will become part of your daily life, and yet others will be so profoundly beautiful that they will fill your heart and your memory. Make a flower mandala, experience a chocolate meditation, be inspired by Louie's amazing images, discover nature on a sunrise walk through the Garden's trails, savor a beautiful sunset and then explore Origami in the Garden, the sculpture of Kevin Box, on a night-time garden walk.

The event will begin with a magical experience throughout the Garden Friday night, January 13. This evening will be filled with wonder, awe, and sensory experiences that will foster a community experience and serve as our grounding for the event. Saturday, January 14, and Sunday, January 15, will be broken down into sunrise activities to start the day; four keynote sessions; four breakout sessions with tracks in food, art, herbal medicine, Garden tours, and movement options; diverse pop-up activities sprinkled throughout the Garden; as well as a vendor tent. Pop-up activities as well as the vendor booths will be open to the general Garden guests as well as event participants. 🌱

Flourish in the Garden* weekend tickets are $500 per person and include the Friday evening kick off celebration, all classes, keynote lectures, workshops, and activities plus garden inspired meals.

Holiday Floral Designs with Jane Godshalk, presented by Naples Garden Club and Naples Botanical Garden

Jane Godshalk is an internationally recognized floral designer with a uniquely American style that is fresh, and uncomplicated. Her book, Flower Arranging Secrets—Natural Designs for Everyday Living, demystifies the art of floral design in an environmentally friendly way. Jane is on the faculty of Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, and has been recognized with a National Medal in Flower Arranging from the Garden Club of America for “consistently innovative designs,” as well as an American Horticultural Society honor for “outstanding floral design education in the classroom, in publications, and on the platform.” She has represented the United States at the Chelsea Flower Show (London) and the World Association of Flower Arrangers (Boston and Dublin) and is a member of the American Institute of Floral Designers (AIFD). Jane has also served on the board of the Philadelphia Flower Show and the Garden Club of America.

Stylish and Innovative Holiday Arranging

December 5, 1-3pm, Kapnick Hall inside Naples Botanical Garden, $30

Registration: www.naplesgardenclub.org/events/nbg-december5-jane-godshalk/

For more information call 239.643.7275

This lecture and demonstration is part of the Naples Garden Club monthly meetings and will start with a brief introduction from the club president with some club updates. Next, Jane will demonstrate how to make floral designs using unusual combinations of flowers and foliage and innovative techniques. A wide variety of containers, flowers, and foliage will be combined with exciting accessories to create designs that take you on a floral tour from graceful to grand. All of Jane’s arrangements will be available to take home by purchasing tickets in the raffle at the end of the program. Don’t miss out—you could bring home something fabulous!

Elegant Holiday Design—A Hands-on Workshop

December 6, 9:30-11:30am, FGCU Kapnick Center, Buehler Auditorium, $100

Registration: www.naplesgardenclub.org/events/nbg-december6-jane-godshalk/

For more information call 239.643.7275 | Registration Deadline: November 21, 2016

This workshop gives participants the choice of creating a long, low horizontal arrangement or a tall vertical design using long-lasting greens and flowers. An innovative combination of tropical materials and more temperate flowers will be used in an all green-and-white color palette to enhance your holiday décor. The workshop will cover the design theory of branch placement and focal area emphasis, and use techniques of foliage manipulation and flower grouping for dramatic design emphasis. Participants will be able to take their designs home to enjoy! 🌿

Night Lights

IN THE GARDEN

December 15-23, December 26-30, 2016
and January 2-4, 2017: 6-9pm each evening

Make plans now to join us for this spectacular holiday light show featuring entertainment, family activities, festive sweets and treats, and much more! And new this year, Night Lights in the Garden will include our seasonal exhibit, Origami in the Garden, lit especially for the evening event, providing a dramatic view of these enchanting sculptures. The 25 playful, large-scale works of art will be on view each evening during Night Lights in the Garden.

MEMBER PRE-SALE

Garden Members enjoy a special opportunity to purchase tickets during the Member Pre-Sale beginning October 24. Tickets will become available to the general public on November 21. Take advantage of this time to make sure your membership is up-to-date and plan to purchase your tickets in advance, as we expect evenings to sell out.

Lecture and Workshop with Robert J. Lang December 7

Robert J. Lang has been an avid student of origami for over 40 years and is recognized as one of the world's leading masters of the art, with over 500 designs catalogued and diagrammed. He is noted for designs of great detail and realism, and includes in his repertoire some of the most complex origami designs ever created. His work combines aspects of the Western school of mathematical origami design with the Eastern emphasis upon line and form to yield models that are at once distinctive, elegant, and challenging to fold. They have been shown in exhibitions in New York (Museum of Modern Art), Paris (Carrousel du Louvre), Salem (Peabody Essex Museum), San Diego (Mingei Museum of World Folk Art), and Kaga, Japan (Nippon Museum Of Origami), among others.

Join Dr. Lang as he presents From Flapping Birds to Space Telescopes: The Art and Science of Origami at Artis—Naples, The Baker Museum, 5833 Pelican Bay Blvd., December 7, from 10am-12pm. Please visit artisnaples.org or call 239.597.1900 for lecture details.

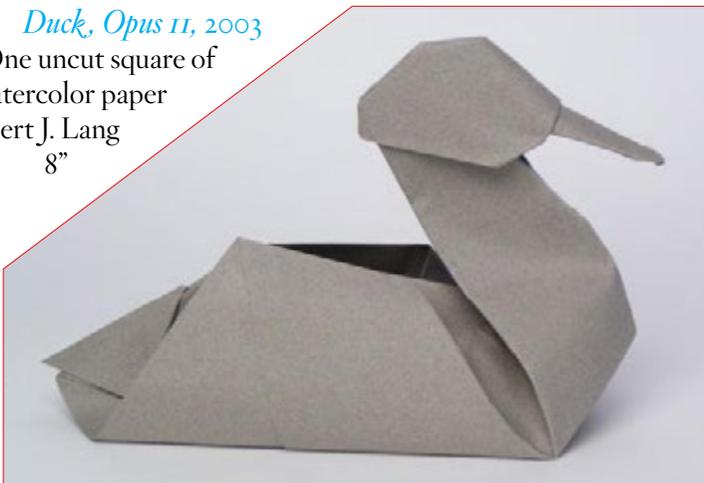

Following Dr. Lang's lecture at Artis–Naples, he will lead a folding workshop at Naples Botanical Garden, 4820 Bayshore Drive. Bringing Origami to Life: Artistic Folding Techniques will be held in Kapnick Hall from 2-4pm; participation fee: $35 for Garden Members / $40 for Non-Members. To register, please call 239.643.7275 or visit naplesgarden.org for details.

This workshop will explore some of the folding techniques that were developed in the latter part of the 20th century that added life and natural form to origami, in particular, the technique known as wet-folding. All paper will be provided. Some small amount of origami experience is desirable, but not needed. Space is allowed for up to 30 participants.

Meet the Interns

Interns are a vital part of the Garden’s success and bring with them a sense of exuberance and a new perspective. The internship experience is an opportunity for personal growth and often results in a career in public horticulture. For example, during Katie Schulman’s years as a student at Florida Gulf Coast University, she interned in a range of positions at Naples Botanical Garden before taking on the role of Native Plant Specialist at the Garden. “An internship gives you the opportunity to learn first-hand the realities of a job,” she says. “My internships at the Garden allowed me to refine my interests and professional goals in environmental sciences, while at the same time introducing me to new interests that I didn’t learn about in the classroom.” This spring and summer the Garden hosted four interns.

“Caterpillars and butterflies are total gateway bugs to learning more about six-legged life forms.”

JESSICA BAKER recently graduated from Florida Gulf Coast University with a B.A. in Environmental Studies and minors in Art, Biology, and Interdisciplinary Studies. Jessica has been working in the Education Department, doing everything from leading school tours, helping with Summer Camp, growing plants for Collier Greens school gardens, and researching paper arts for upcoming Origami in the Garden programming. “Working here has taught me a great deal about gardening, teaching, and keeping an organization like the Garden moving forward on a daily basis,” she says. Since starting the internship, she has become increasingly interested in gardening at home, learning about new species of plants, and, to her surprise, understanding insects. “Caterpillars and butterflies are total gateway bugs to learning more about six-legged life forms,” Jessica explains. After her internship, Jessica would like to continue working in outdoor education. Jessica’s internship was sponsored by Juliet C. Sproul.

“I think there’s something inherently beautiful about the way humans are drawn to flowers.”

In just the last two years, AUSTIN HAGWOOD has cultivated a love of anthropology at the University of Oxford, taught English in Cairo, earned a B.A. in English from the University of Notre Dame, conducted field work in Finland and New Zealand – and interned in the Conservation Department at Naples Botanical Garden. Plants bridge Austin’s varied interests: “I think there’s something inherently beautiful about the way humans are drawn to flowers as ephemeral forms of wonder. I became more interested in plants when I started pursuing anthropology and realized that humanity's relationship with plants is a universal language shared across cultures." During his time at the Garden, Austin helped manage the Garden's natural areas and also accompanied Dr. George Wilder, Botanist and Herbarium Curator at the Garden, on fieldwork at Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary. After his internship, Austin will begin an MPhil in Social Anthropology with a focus on ethnobotany at the University of Cambridge in England. "Despite my unorthodox background, the Garden gave me the opportunity of a lifetime to immerse myself in botany. The internship has directly shaped my work at Cambridge next year," Austin says. Austin's internship was sponsored by Juliet C. Sproul.

"Volunteers serve as the backbone of Naples Botanical Garden."

SARAH MIRANDA has become a familiar face to the Garden's hundreds of volunteers during her internship in Volunteer Services and Horticulture. One of her major projects this spring involved photographing these many volunteers for the annual Volunteer Recognition ceremony. Sarah has also been working on developing a volunteer newsletter that she hopes will enhance communication to our volunteer corps. Working closely with Volunteer Services and the Horticulture Department has allowed her to "truly see that volunteers serve as the backbone of Naples Botanical Garden. They dedicate endless hours to ensure that our Garden stays pristine and maintained, and they each bring their own individual talents to the Garden as well." A graduate of William Paterson University in New Jersey with a degree in Earth Science, Sarah is interested in pursuing a career in landscape architecture and creating interactive educational gardens that connect families and the outdoors. Sarah's internship was sponsored by the Kennedy Family Foundation.

"Bromeliads have, perhaps, one of the wildest lifestyles on Earth."

KAITLYN WAGNER is a senior at Florida Gulf Coast University, majoring in Biology. At the Garden, Kaitlyn worked in the Conservation department, helping to maintain native plantings and also researching the best conditions in which to grow and protect the endangered Tillandsia utriculata bromeliad. This project has cultivated a new interest in bromeliads for Kaitlyn, who now counts bromeliads among her favorite plants. "Bromeliads have, perhaps, one of the wildest lifestyles on Earth. As epiphytes, they have adapted to a perilous existence, hanging onto the bark of a tree where water and nutrients are hard to come by. I can't wait to learn more about this group of plants," she says. Kaitlyn has a special interest in species that have lost genetic diversity to habitat loss and inbreeding and hopes to study molecular techniques to conserve these species in graduate school. Kaitlyn's internship was sponsored by Juliet C. Sproul. 🌿

Saturdays and Sundays
from 10:30am-12pm & 1:30-3pm
in the Vicky C. & David Byron
Smith Children's Garden

Come and join us for our W.O.N.D.E.R. in the Garden program! Together we will imagine, create, and explore throughout the Vicky C. and David Byron Smith Children's Garden with monthly themed lessons and activities. No prior registration necessary. All W.O.N.D.E.R. programs are included with regular Garden admission.

- October: Super Seeds – Shhhhhhh, want to know a secret? Every sleeping seed contains all that it needs to become a full grown plant and produce seeds of its own. Join us this month as we discover where seeds come from, where they go, and what they need to survive. Then plant a seed with us to take home and care for all on your own!
- November: Tree-mendous Trees – Have you met Chuck? He's our royal poinciana tree across from the Hamill Cracker House in the Smith Children's Garden. Come get to know him and all the other trees that live in the Children's Garden and then learn how to make an origami ornament to decorate your own trees at home.
- December: Original Origami – This December, help us welcome our newest exhibit Origami in the Garden as we explore the Japanese art of origami. Did you know the word origami literally means "folding paper"? Come test your own folding skills as we learn a few of the basic origami folds to create a variety of ornaments and figures.
- January: Beautiful Birds – Soar into the New Year as we discuss Florida's beautiful birds this January. We will learn to identify some of our native birds and their flight behaviors, and even fold some origami models. Discover how humans mimic these flight strategies through designing your own paper airplane to be tested from the tree house!

NAPLES BOTANICAL GARDEN'S 2ND ANNUAL Community Scarecrow Competition
November 1-30

Join us in welcoming back our Community Scarecrow Competition at Naples Botanical Garden. The scarecrows entered will be on display in the Vicky C. and David Byron Smith Children's Garden throughout the month of November. Registration is open to families, businesses, and individuals of all ages. Participation is free and prizes will be awarded to first, second, and third place winners. The deadline for registration is October 14, 2016.

For more information regarding rules and registration, please visit our website at naplesgarden.org or contact Emily Maya at emaya@naplesgarden.org or 239.325.1908.

Family Planting Day!
Saturday, November 12

Come kick off the fall with us in the Smith Children's Garden for a fun-filled day of harvesting the summer sweet potato crop, planting our seasonal vegetable gardens, and celebrating the fall season! After creating some fall-themed crafts, see if you can find all the scarecrows visiting the Garden and vote for your favorite. You won't want to miss out on all the fun this November on Family Planting Day!

Collier
GREENS

School garden excitement is growing in southwest Florida! Naples Botanical Garden recently teamed up with Lipman Family Farms to recognize outstanding local school garden efforts through a special recognition program. Recipient schools were awarded $500 to reinvest in their gardens, signage noting their designation, and a free field trip opportunity to Naples Botanical Garden. Schools receiving this award together serve over 6,000 PreKindergarten-12th grade students just in their garden programs, which are located all across Collier County. This year's recipient gardens are:

- Big Cypress Elementary School
- Calusa Park Elementary School
- Chabad Naples Preschool of the Arts
- Grace Place for Children & Families
- Gulfview Middle School
- Immokalee Middle School
- Lake Trafford Elementary School
- Manatee Elementary School
- Manatee Middle School
- Marco Island Academy
- Mike Davis Elementary School
- Palmetto Elementary School
- Parkside Elementary School
- Pelican Marsh Elementary School
- Poinciana Elementary School
- Rhodora J. Donahue Academy
- Sea Gate Elementary School
- Seacrest Country Day School

Collier Greens holds free educator workshops throughout the year and offers many other resources including garden mentoring, free plants at workshops, and an EarthBox® lending library. Be sure to save the date for our school garden summit on Saturday, February 4!

Connecting People with Plants

Naples Botanical Garden is more than just an offering of visual delights. In addition to creating transportive experiences to the tropics and subtropics through our designed gardens and botanical collections, the Garden has a strong commitment to community outreach. We work with many local, regional, and national organizations on conservation and research projects, youth and adult education, and community beautification. Connecting people with plants, whether here in the Garden or beyond our gates, is central to our mission.

Community Enhancement

The Horticulture Department has taken a lead role in several projects that help to brighten special places in our community. This past year, Garden staff designed and planted a small garden at the Golden Gate Senior Center. The planted spaces include a colorful bromeliad entryway and a garden space that provides for a moment of respite and reflection. “The garden here at the Center brings great joy to our seniors,” says Tatiana Fortune, program Director at the Golden Gate Senior Center. “We are very thankful for the generosity of Naples Botanical Garden. This would not have been possible without the gift of plants and planting.”

Sustainable Outreach

Garden staff also play important roles in shaping the future of our community through roles on advisory committees, educational outreach, and partnerships with other local organizations. One example that brings together a multidisciplinary team of partners in a collaborative effort to protect our natural resources through sustainable landscape practices is the Greenscape Alliance. The Alliance, based out of Rookery Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve, includes among its members Collier County Stormwater Management, the City of Naples, University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences Collier County Extension, and Florida Gulf Coast University. It is through this partnership that the Garden hosts community workshops aimed at protecting our local watershed. Eric Foht, Natural Areas Manager at the Garden, leads training sessions aimed at homeowners and professional landscapers to reduce the negative impacts of fertilizers on aquatic systems. “This is a great opportunity for us to share the best management practices we use at the Garden with the public to improve water quality in neighborhood ponds and ultimately the Gulf of Mexico,” says Eric.

Quality of Life

Buehler Enabling Garden Coordinator Taylor Burnham gives back to the community through her role on Collier County Public School’s Advisory Committee for Exceptional Student Education. The collaborative committee works for the understanding of, respect for, and support of all children with disabilities in the community. Through this active network of parents, educators and service providers, the Garden shares a role in improving student quality of life. For Taylor, meeting community needs is all about listening. “It is only through building meaningful relationships and valuing their voices that we are able to truly have an impact. For the Garden, this means making an effort to get directly involved with the schools, parents, and local organizations that form the foundation from which our therapeutic programs draw their support. We cannot plant seeds of change in the community and expect them to grow without making the effort to enrich the soil from which they sprouted.”

One great outcome of our role on this committee is the partnership formed in 2014 with the University of South Florida Center for Autism and Related Disorders. The Center trained Garden staff and volunteers in how to create a sensory-comfortable experience for people with Autism. We are proud of our Autism Friendly business designation. 🌱

Meet a Member Mati Wood, age 6

On almost any afternoon in the Garden, you're likely to find Mati Wood, age 6, chasing lizards in 'his' garden. For Mati, it's hard to choose a favorite area of Naples Botanical Garden. He'll tell you, "I love the whole thing!" After all, he has spent a lot of time here.

He and his dad, Tyler, have been members since 2010 and live so close, they rollerblade to the Garden almost every day after school following a loop around Lake Avalon at Sugden Regional Park and the nearby pond behind East Naples Community Park. Mati's favorite place to do homework is in Lu's Courtyard overlooking the Water Garden with a side of fries and lemonade from Fogg Café. (We think this is an awesome spot, too.) And when school is out, you can find Mati having fun with other campers at the Garden's Summer Camp.

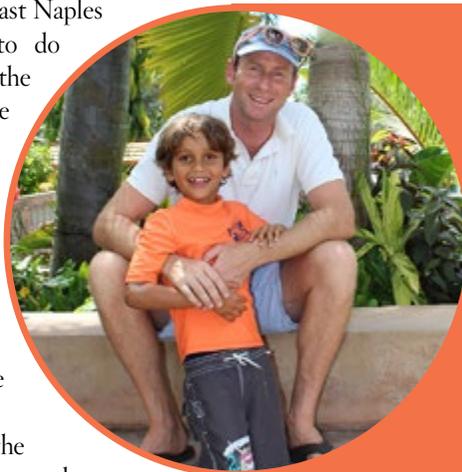

Mati is quick to tell you that last year's Dinosaurs in the Garden exhibit was his favorite by far. And his impressive knowledge of dinosaurs was useful when Mati, who loves meeting new people, led impromptu tours of the life-size animatronic creatures for other children at the Garden. His grandparents, Yvonne and Herbert Wood, who have been members of the Garden since 2004, love seeing Mati embrace learning in the Garden from a young age.

If you ask Mati why you should join Naples Botanical Garden, he says that being a member is great because you can come as much as you want and there is always something new to see. We couldn't agree more. And, his family gets to enjoy great events like Family Planting Day and Origami in the Garden for free!

Thank you, Mati and Tyler, for being such great supporters of the Garden. See you soon! 🌿

For Mati, it's hard to choose a favorite area of Naples Botanical Garden.

He'll tell you,
"I love the whole thing!"

Volunteer Orientation Dates

October 21, 2016, through April 21, 2017

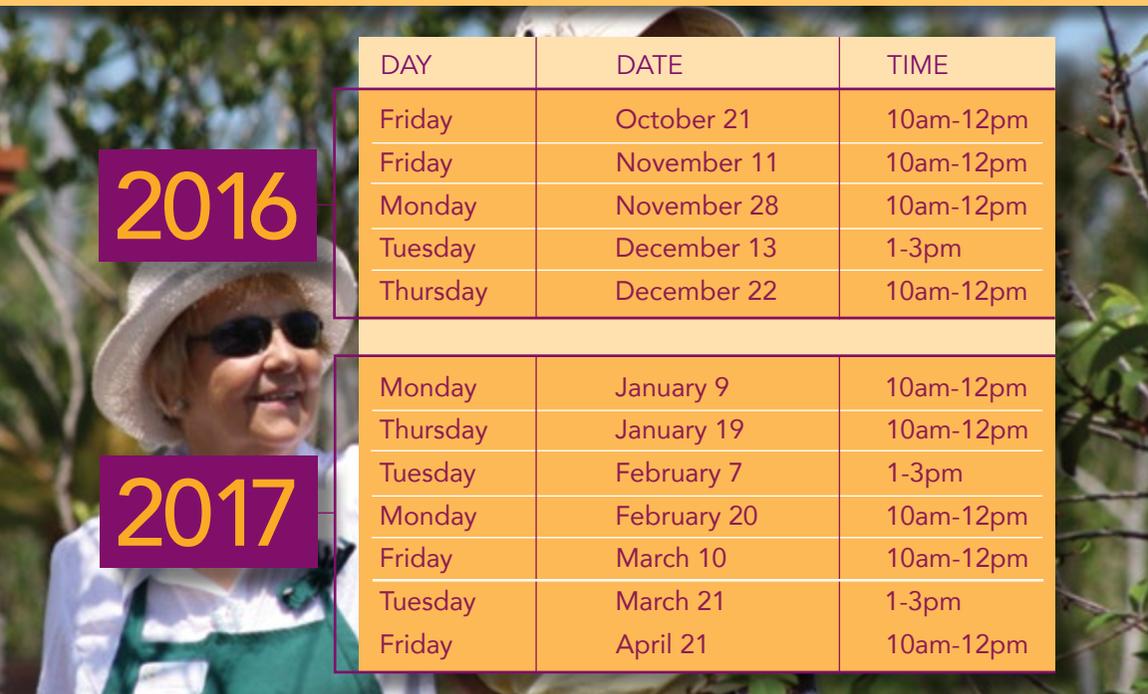

Have you been looking for a meaningful and fun way to meet people and give back to your community? How about volunteering at the Garden? Sign up for a volunteer orientation session from the list below and you will learn more about the amazing opportunities at the Garden! Please email Sally Richardson, Associate Director of Volunteer Services, to let her know when you will attend. No preliminary paperwork or interview. srichardson@naplesgarden.org

Sally can also meet with you ‘one-on-one’ after hours or on weekends if your schedule prevents you from attending an orientation; however, you are encouraged to attend an orientation if at all possible.

It is important that you visit the Garden ($14.95 admission fee) and visit our website before attending an orientation. naplesgarden.org

Please look at the Volunteer Opportunities located on the website (click on Support, then click on Volunteer) to see if there is a good match for the time you are willing to commit and the skills that you can bring to the assignments that are currently available.

Volunteer Orientations will be limited to the first 12 people who sign up. If you sign up, please keep your commitment or let Sally know by email if you are unable to attend so that we can open up space for another prospect. Thank you!
