

Royal Palm Society members support critical areas of the Garden's mission. Our work and success are possible because of you.

Thank You!

Conservation

Plant life is imperiled, whether from changing climate or expanding development. Royal Palm Society membership gifts help our experts study and conserve subtropical and tropical plants, ensuring their viability for generations to come. The team's work both contributes to global conservation and environmental health here in Southwest Florida. Using in-house research and data from a network of Latin American and Caribbean partners, our Conservation Team guides our community in creating landscapes that resist storms, tolerate heat, provide habitat, and require minimal water and fertilizer.

Horticulture

Building on the expertise of our Conservation staff, our skilled Horticulture Team makes sure rare and threatened species—such as native Florida orchids—thrive within the Garden. This team uses its abundant creativity, vast knowledge and skilled design to create and maintain the beautiful vistas for which Naples Botanical Garden is known. Watch for ever-changing collections, including unusual or historically significant trees "rescued" from throughout Southwest Florida—all made possible through generous support.

Education

The Education Team aspires to be a global leader in environmental education for all ages and audiences by offering engaging activities, accurate information, and impactful experiences that illuminate plants' critical role in supporting all life on Earth. Member support helped Garden educators launch new programs this year, including guided cellphone tours, web-based lessons, kid-friendly activity packs, and outreach to seniors—all designed to increase the connections between people and nature.

Other Ways To Give

There are many ways to make a tax-deductible gift to Naples Botanical Garden. You may make your contribution with a check, cash, or credit card. Additionally, you may like to discuss other ways to give including stock, IRA rollovers, and matching gifts.
