America's Everglades: Through the Lens of Clyde Butcher

Experience the Exhibition Starting April 15

NAPLES, FL – April 6, 2021 – Naples Botanical Garden is committed to the connection between plants and people. What better way to embrace that relationship in Southwest Florida than through the world-renowned work of Clyde Butcher. With his century-old camera, Butcher has been exploring and documenting the Everglades for more than three decades. The result is a stunning collection of large-format black-and-white photographs that capture untouched parts of the nation's largest subtropical wilderness. Delicate ecosystems, rare botanical specimens, and sweeping landscapes bring the wonder of this mysterious part of our country to light.

America's Everglades: Through the Lens of Clyde Butcher highlights Butcher's artistic eye as well as his deep and long-held commitment to conservation. His work challenges us to explore the heritage we share in the natural world and to work together to protect it. Through his photography, Butcher hopes to educate the public by bringing environmental issues to the forefront of public consciousness.

This exhibition is located inside Kapnick Hall and is included with general Garden admission. On view April 15 – June 15.
